SUDDEN DEATH .- The many friends and acquaintances of Mr. R. C. Acton were shocked to learn yesterday morning that that gentleman had died suddenly about an hour before daybreak.

Mr. Acton had apparently been in his normal health up to the time he retired Saturday night and had been at his store as usual. Between four and five o'clock yesterday morning, how-ever, he grew ill, and his symptoms became so alarming that a physician was summoned, but the patient expirwas summoned, but the partient expin-ed before medical aid reached him. Neuralgia of the heart is supposed to have caused his death. Mr. Acton was a watchmaker and jeweler, and with the exception of that of Major George Duffer his establishment was probably the oldest in the city. Over thirty years ago the deceased was an appren-tice with Mr. A. Fuchshill, who then onducted business on the south side of ing street, next to the corner of Royal. ouring the four years of the war he re mained at the same place in the em-ploy of the several gentlemen who suc-ceeded Mr. Fuchshill. Industrious and reliable and possessing practical business qualifications, it was not long before he was able to open a modest store of his own next to the Opera House, and by strict attention to business he prospered to such an extent that he subsequently found himself in a posi-tion to erect a large and handsome store on the square above, where he had since conducted trade. The dea oniet and centl ture, rather shrinking from prominence Mr. Acton was in his 52d year, and leaves a widow and five children. His

He had talked so much of suicide that in a few hours' time he had ceased to attract attention. After the boat left this city at half-past three o'clock in the afternoon, however, his movements became suspicious, and had attracted the attention of several passengers. When the steamer was passing Geisboro, Jackson suddenly mounted the rail and before his rash act could be frustrated he had jumped overboard. Those who were on the steamer at the time say that after the cry, "man overboard," had been giver. there was no attempt made to stop the boat and that she continued on her at 7:30 o'clock will be given for the boat and that she continued on her way to Washington where the suicide was reported to the police. The churches were well attended and a strong and higher market for stocks, due to a belief that the Senate will take final action on the silver repeal bill before Saturday. Prices advanced 4 to 13 per cent. The tendency of prices continued upward during the first hour of business and even the lower cables from London failed to check the rise. The general market is strengthened by the belief that this is the last week of the debate clock on Saturday evening brought on silver matters in the Senate and the reduction in the rate of sterling exchange to $4~83\frac{1}{2}$ to $4~85\frac{1}{2}.$ The weakness of sterling exchange led to a revival of talk about gold imports. The improvement in prices ranged from 1/2 to 2 per cent. At 11 o'clock the market was strong.
